Senior Research Analyst

BOSTON, MA, October 9, 2018 – BNY Mellon Investment Management’s U.S. Multi-Asset Manager, which will be rebranded Mellon effective January 2, 2019, welcomes Fabian Weinstein-Jones as a senior research analyst, reporting to the Head of US Rates and Securitized Robert Bayston.

As a seasoned fixed income analyst, Fabian brings over thirteen years of investment experience to the role. On the Securitized team, he will be responsible for identifying relative value opportunities and industry trends and providing insights on agency MBS, non-agency RMBS and related derivatives.

Weinstein-Jones’ career has focused on the securitized market since graduating from MIT in 2005. He joins the firm from Fidelity, where he began his career as a securitized fixed income research associate. He served in several roles at the firm, honing his sector expertise. Starting in 2011, he served as a fixed income research analyst charged with developing model frameworks for various RMBS subsectors, conducting macro analysis on the housing market, making credit recommendations on homebuilders, and actively monitoring government policy on housing.

“We are thrilled to add Fabian’s distinctive set of expertise to the team,” says Head of US Rates and Securitized Robert Bayston. “His quantitative and fundamental research experience across the securitized sector will be a tremendous benefit in our quest to add alpha to client portfolios.”

About the Firm
